

Factory construction faces up to a range of challenges

Steel-frames and factory fabrication can eliminate a host of building problems.

Are you looking to build your dream home on your out of town site? Is your site a 'challenge'? Or are you worried about unforeseen problems? If so, Prominda Homes may be able to provide the answers.

Prominda can pre-build your home off-site in its factory and deliver what they promise will be "an amazing result".

Prominda believes the best homes they build are projects where the customer has engaged with Prominda's architect to design their home.

The architect can provide advice on solar passive design, utilising the environment where the house is to be sited so as to capitalise on views, as well as in making the most of the site's unique qualities.

Homes can be designed to suit the lifestyle and personality of its owners.

Quality is the focus of any Prominda build. Double-glazing is a standard feature, with insulation measures adhering to industry-best practice. Joinery and fittings can be specified to the customer's taste and budget.

The quality is further tightly controlled by building in a factory environment. The group's engineered steel frame allows them to create large internal spaces that can be crane lifted onto the home owner's site, depending on need.

This weekend provides the opportunity to visit The ShowRoom to talk to the people at Prominda about building without the worries of blow-outs in time and cost.

Be the best you can be living a life decluttered

Decluttering - everybody's doing it. And Amy Kennedy, the woman behind The Organising Bee, can provide support and guidance for the process.

Feeling disorganised? The Organising Bee can help ease the pressures of everyday life.

Amy Kennedy, Canberra's very own professional organiser and decluttering expert and founder of The Organising Bee, has been supporting families within the Canberra region to revamp and organise their homes since 2015.

The Organising Bee provides hands-on support for families and individuals wishing to minimise clutter in the home and establish personalised organising systems tailored to their lifestyle and habits.

Winner of the Best of Houzz Award for Service for the past three years (2017-2019), and a Professional Member of the Institute of Professional Organisers (IOPO) and the National Association of Productivity and Organizing Professionals (NAPO), Kennedy is living proof that strong organisational skills can be learnt and now devotes her time to sharing these skills and the benefits of a living a clutter-free lifestyle to families seeking life balance.

If you have a specific organising or decluttering question that you would like answered, feel free to have a chat to her at The Organising Bee, stand 74 at the Canberra Creative Home Show.

Kennedy will also be on stage, discussing decluttering and her six steps to clutter-free living at 3:30pm on Saturday, March 2.
